Summer School Still Has Room For Some Pupils

There is still room for some additional pupils in elementary and junior high summer school classes, according to Charles M. Day, District 11 administrative assistant.

The district offers remedial and enriched classes for pupils in grades one through eight. Elementary classes meet at Washington, Queen Palmer, and Stratton schools. The junior high classes for pupils in grades seven and eight are at Horace Mann.

Enriched classes are for pupils scholastically in the upper 15 to 20 per cent of their classes. Elementary pupils science and mathematics, literature and creative writing, and art and related activities.

Enriched courses for seventh and eighth graders are in general science and general humanities. The latter is a fused course that includes the study of geography and history with special emphasis on cultural history including art, literature, and music.

The remedial subjects for elementary school pupils are reading, arithmetic, language arts, and library and recreational reading. Junior high pupils in need of remedial work may take reading, arithmetic, and English.

The six-week summer program runs from June 15 to July 24. Elementary classes meet from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Junior high classes meet from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. making it possible for pupils to take two subjects.

Summer classes are open to all pupils regardless of whether or not they regularly attend District 11 schools.

Academy 2nd Classmen Leave for Overseas Study

New Air Force Academy Second Classmen, a total of 456, left the Academy June 4 to participate in a field study of overseas areas. An additional 119 will leave June 27 to take part in the same program.

Six groups of cadets will tour five areas: Northern Europe, 288; Southern Europe, 116; Far East, 112; Australia and New Zealand, 57; and Latin America, 52.

On the Northern European trip cadets will visit London, tour RAF Technical College Henlow and RAF College Cranwell; Cambridge University, St. Paul's Cathedral, Westminster Abbey and Buckingham Palace. In Paris they will visit NATO and SHAPE headquarters. They will tour West Berlin, and pass through Checkpoint Charlie into East Berlin. They will also tour Wiesbaden, and the German Air Force Academy at Nuberg in Munich. In Salon, France, they will visit the French Air Force Academy, Ecole d'Air.

Cadets visiting Latin America will tour Mexico City, the Panama Canal Zone, Lima, Peru; the Argentine Air Force Academy at Cordoba, Argentina; Rio de Janeiro, and the Brazilian Air Force Academy in Brasilia.

Visitors to the Far East will see Hawaii and the Philippines. The Chinese Air Force Academy in Taipei, Taiwan; the Japanese Self-Defense Academy in Tokyo, Japan, and the Philippine Air Force Academy in Manila in the Philippines.

Another group will visit Canberra and Melbourne, Australia; the Royal Australian Air Force Academy at Point Cook, the Royal New Zealand Air Force Academy at Wigram, New Zealand. They will also tour Christchurch and Wellington, N.Z. En route they will stop at Hawaii and the Philippines.

The overseas trips are intended to provide cadets with an indoctrination in the role of U.S. military forces at command and operational levels overseas including the observation of USAF weapon systems in place and ready.

In all areas except Latin America, briefings at Headquarters units such as NATO and SHAPE furnish cadets first-hand information on U.S. commitments in alliances and an acquaintance with the organization, scope and purpose of collective security organizations.

The program is geared to supplement classroom knowledge of the capabilities of foreign Air Force and foster respect and fraternity between USAF Academy cadets and their contemporaries in free world military schools.

At the end of the field study June 20, cadets in five of the six groups will report to U.S. Air Force bases throughout the world to begin "Operation Third Lieutenant." One of the groups touring Northern Europe will take part in this program before they go overseas.

In "Operation Third Lieutenant" a cadet is assigned to an Air Force installation as an assistant to the officer in charge of various squadron functions so that the cadet can gain a first-hand look at the duties and problems of Air Force officers at the squadron level.

RCAF Fighter Unit to Locate At ADC Base

The United States and Canada announced Friday that a Royal Canadian Air Force Fighter Interceptor Squadron will be temporarily deployed to a Northwest U.S. Air Force Air Defense Command (ADC) base in mid-summer 1964, for approximately three months.

The 409th All-Weather Squadron, commanded by Wing Commander Graham Inglis of Glasgow, Scotland, will be stationed at ADC's Paine Field, near Everett, Washington while the runway at its home base, RCAF Station Comox, in British Columbia, is being repaired.

The RCAF air defense fighter interceptor squadron will be co-located at Paine Field with the 57th Fighter Group, commanded by Colonel Jack W. Williams of Munday, Texas. The USAF unit flies the F-102 Delta Dagger supersonic all-weather interceptor. This initial temporary transfer of a Canadian fighter interceptor squadron to the United States has the approval of both neighboring governments and their Air Forces.

Flying CF-101B Voodoo supersonic interceptors, the RCAF squadron will be completely self-supporting during the deployment. More than 180 officers and airmen will move with the aircraft and support equipment to Paine Field.

The squadron will remain under the operational control of the 25th North American Air Defense Command (NORAD) Region, headquartered at McChord AFB, Wash.

The air defense area or mission of the unit will not change, since it will be located at the base near the Canadian border. RCAF and U.S. Air Force Air Defense Command fighter interceptor squadrons are part of the joint U.S. - Canadian North American Air Defense Command (NORAD), headquartered at Colorado Springs.

Canada and the United States pulled their air defense forces together in 1957 to form the present North American Air Defense Command.

The continental air defense organization is made up of United States Air Force, Army, Navy and RCAF units.

Board Members Attend Christian Scientist Meet

A call to use "spiritual power" to help solve the world's "thorny problems of human relations and race inequalities" greeted Christian Scientists at their annual meeting today in Boston.

Two local members of the faith are attending the meeting at the mother church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in the Massachusetts city. They are Mrs. Mildred Wraith, 2306 Valley Forge Rd., and Miss Joy Williams, 822 N. Weber St., who are members of the executive board of the church here at 2502 Palmer Park Blvd.

A message from the Christian Science board of directors reaffirmed the church's conviction that the mightiest force on earth is "the still small voice of universal Christian idealism."

All human thinking is being stirred to its very depths, the message noted. But "the Mind of Christ summons divisions of creed and doctrine and binds in one holy family all who love God and seek to do His Will," it continued.

Edward Froderman's election as president of the church was announced. Froderman is a former vice-president of a Chicago bank, who resigned in 1949 to enter the public practice of Christian Science Publishing Society in Boston.

An announcement of interest made at the meeting was that more copies of the church's founder Mary Baker Eddy's book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" were sold during 1963 than in any other year since its publication in 1875.

Daughter of LBJ Scores Popular Illinois Success

HARVARD, Ill. (AP) — McHenry County may have gone Republican in every presidential election this century, but it has given at least one Democrat its overwhelming approval.

The youngest of the LBJ's, blue-eyed Luci Baines Johnson, charmed record crowds of 200,000 Saturday, and upstaged 15 mayors and a would-be governor on hand for the 23rd annual Harvard Milk Day.

In Harvard, "milk capital of the world" a cheering crowd estimated at 100,000 lined the sidewalks to watch 16-year-old Luci lead a parade down the city's white-painted main street.

"I've heard that you paint your main street white for milk day, but I didn't believe it until I saw it," she exclaimed.

Charles Percy, Republican candidate for governor of Illinois and 15 Illinois and Wisconsin mayors on hand for a milking contest were no match for the Texas warmth of the enthusiastic teen-ager.

Earlier she literally stopped a children's pet parade in La Grange, Ill., where an estimated 90,000 persons turned out to catch a glimpse of the President's perky envoy.

Among the pets was a year-old female pup given by Caroline Kennedy to Karen House, 11, of Westchester, Ill. The dog, Butterfly, was born in the White House last June to Pushinka, daughter of Strelka, the Soviet space dog. Karen was selected by the late President John F. Kennedy's family from among 5,000 children who had sent letters asking for Butterfly or one of the three other pups.

In Harvard, Luci crowned the 1964 milk queen and told her and the other girls "I know how you girls must feel—a little scared and a little nervous—when you get up in front of a big crowd and try to do your best."

Candidate Percy, who has five children of his own—including teen-aged twin girls, had this to say of Luci: "after talking to a charming young girl like that, I'm glad my children are coming home from school soon. They make such good campaigners."

Christine Keeler Freed From Prison

LONDON (AP) — Christine Keeler, 22, the red-haired prostitute who once shook the British government, was released from Holloway Prison today.

She had served six months of a nine-month sentence for perjury and conspiring to obstruct justice. She had tried to frame a Negro ex-lover, jazz singer Aloysius (Lucky) Gordon, with testimony that he beat her up.

Christine's perjury trial was part of the aftermath of a sex and security scandal which brought John D. Profumo's resignation as war minister a year ago and threatened to tumble Prime Minister Harold Macmillan from power. Macmillan rode out the storm but resigned a few months later because of his health.

we'll build some sort of coalition to support some other candidate. I don't know when, but possibly before the convention. I have no idea who the candidate might be." Ambassador Lodge has 45 first-ballot votes, although he is not an announced candidate.

For the most part, however, GOP leaders either remained silent or said they would not take part in such a move.

Among those declining comment was Ray Bliss, powerful Ohio state chairman, who will have a lot to say about where his state's 58 delegates wind up.

New Jersey Republican Chairman Webster B. Todd said he had no plans to move behind a coalition candidate, adding "We're not going to be part of any move that would split the party wide open."

Gov. John Love of Colorado said he probably would not join such a move because it "would be destructive and might hurt more than it would help."

Similar replies came from key party leaders in Florida, Tennessee, Illinois and Missouri.

Asked whether they will try to swing uncommitted votes to Goldwater in the weeks before the convention, most party leaders said no, but added they expected such moves by backers of the senator.

Tennessee State Chairman Harry Carbaugh said, "I'm not planning to lead any move to influence the uncommitted delegates, but I know of certain people who are. That's their right. I feel that when we get together in San Francisco we'll be pretty well of one mind—for Goldwater unless a real fight starts on him."

Charles Percy, GOP gubernatorial candidate in Illinois and leader of that state's convention delegation, said that since California there has been a tendency for Illinois delegates supporting Goldwater to firm up. "Some who said they thought they would vote for him before have now become positive," Percy said.

Missouri National Committeeman Francis Corley said he expects the few uncommitted delegates in that state "to jump on the Goldwater bandwagon."

Kansas State Chairman Richard Rogers said he knew of no drive among the uncommitted delegates "except among the Goldwater people." He predicted that by convention time Goldwater will get 11 votes from Kansas. Seven are now listed as favoring him.

Several leaders agreed that if Goldwater is close to nomination, some uncommitted delegates will cast first ballot votes for the senator.

Carbaugh said, "If it looks like Goldwater is going to be within 50 or 60 votes of getting the nomination on the first ballot, Tennessee, because of its place in the balloting, might cast all 28 votes for him then."

Colorado GOP Chairman Paul Wolf said he was prepared to try to swing that state's 18 votes behind Goldwater if he is close to the nomination.

Florida delegation co-leader William Pawley said there would be "a tendency to swing to Goldwater" if the vote is close.

Also present at the meeting were defense lawyer Joe Tonnahill, Asst. Dist. Atty. A. D. Jim Bowie, and a commission stenographer.

Tonnahill told a news conference that Ruby appeared humbled to be in Warren's presence. Ruby and Warren shook hands at the start and close of the conference, Tonnahill said.

Tonnahill said Ruby was clean-shaven, dressed in white jail coveralls, and "wild-eyed."

Scranton Enters GOP Race Goldwater Faces Blasts

Asked about a statement of Gov. Paul Fannin of Arizona that he didn't believe Goldwater could carry New York, Rockefeller replied with a grin: "I wouldn't want to be the first to contradict a fellow governor."

A closed meeting of the governors with Secretary of State Dean Rusk was on the conference's afternoon agenda.

Eisenhower was the main speaker for a dinner meeting. This was expected to be followed by informal conferences which might bring together all potential candidates for the Republican presidential nomination except Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, on the job in South Vietnam.

What had taken on the aspects Sunday of a "Stop-Goldwater" movement rapidly was changing into an effort by Republican moderates to get Goldwater to accept a strong civil rights declaration in the party platform and to repudiate some of his ideas, such as making Social Security voluntary.

After a day in which GOP moderates flailed away at Goldwater, Gov. Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon summed it up as "an exercise in sheer futility." He said he thinks Goldwater's nomination is certain.

Goldwater said in Chester, Pa., rescued by a U.S. helicopter and flown back to the Kitty Hawk, an embassy spokesman said.

U.S. officials gave no details of the jungle rescue, but it was unofficially reported that several helicopters had been badly shot up in an attempt to find the other pilot, Lt. Charles F. Klusmann, 30, of San Diego, Calif.

Klusman was on a reconnaissance flight when his plane was hit. He was reported to have parachuted safely, but his exact landing spot in the rugged, isolated terrain apparently was not known.

Red China charged that U.S. jet fighters fired two rockets at Khang Khay, Pathet Lao headquarters on the Plaine des Jarres. There was no mention of damage or casualties.

Reliable sources in Vientiane said Laotian air force F28 fighter-bombers armed with machine guns are providing cover for the U.S. reconnaissance planes.

Premier Souvanna Phouma's neutralist government ordered the protection after consultations with U.S. Embassy officials in the wake of the loss of the two American planes.

The Laotian air force has 11 F28s, single-engine propeller planes supplied by the United States. They have been used for bombing Communist supply lines and troop concentrations.

In Washington, the State Department said the reconnaissance flights would be continued with U.S. fighter escorts. The armed escorts were ordered Saturday after the loss of Lynn's plane near Ban Ban, 25 miles northeast of the Plaine des Jarres.

The Downing of the two planes created a new sense of urgency among U.S. officials in Washington. President Johnson met at the White House with his top advisers Sunday. Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara abruptly cancelled an appearance at Ohio University's commencement exercises.

The Pathet Lao already holds one U.S. pilot, a civilian. Eugene Debrun of Kaukauna, Wis., was captured last September when his Air America cargo plane was shot down. Air America is a private line under government charter.

British and Soviet diplomats and members of the International Control Commission were scheduled to fly to Khang Khay Tuesday for talks with Prince Souphanouvong, leader of the Pathet Lao.

Britain and the Soviet Union are co-chairmen of the 1962 international conference on Laos, Canada, Poland and India are members of the commission.

The meeting will take up a Polish proposal for a meeting of the three Laotian factions, the commission nations and Britain and the Soviet Union. Diplomats say the Polish proposal was designed to avoid a direct confrontation between Communist China and the United States.

where he accepted an honorary degree from Pennsylvania Military College, that his time at the conference here would be limited because of Tuesday votes in the Senate. But he said he would be glad to talk to Scranton and other leaders about the issues.

"I think I can safely say that I can run on a platform that would contain the civil rights bill that passes the Congress," said Goldwater. "I can assure you it won't be the one that is before us now."

He added that he thinks less than 1 per cent of the Republicans favor the public accommodations section of the bill.

Gov. John Anderson Jr. of Kansas, conference chairman, said on a television broadcast he doesn't believe Goldwater will change his views, but it was a good idea for Goldwater to talk with other leaders.

Gov. James A. Rhodes of Ohio said on the same program he thinks the presidential nominee will have to accept a "strong platform." He said if Goldwater is nominated, he would run a strong race against President Johnson.

Romney told a news conference Goldwater's views do not "square with the principles for which the Republican party stands on the basis of its past record and heritage."

If Goldwater doesn't clarify them to his satisfaction, the Michigan governor said, "I will do everything in my power to keep him from becoming the party's presidential candidate."

Goldwater has "no popular support in Michigan," said Romney.

Goldwater told a news conference in Chester he expects to be the nominee, but that his critics conceivably could unite and deny him the nomination.

"I won't be confident of it until they've counted the roll call," he said.

Tabulations indicated that Goldwater will push close to 600 publicly committed delegates this week.

Sen. Thurston B. Morton, R-Ky., after meeting with Republican governors to discuss general election campaign plans, predicted Goldwater would fall 80 to 100 votes shy on the first convention ballot of the 655 votes needed for nomination.

Goldwater reiterated that if anybody challenges him seriously for the nomination, he expects it to be former Vice President Richard M. Nixon. Nixon was invited, along with Goldwater, to be a conference guest for Eisenhower's address and would attend any leadership meeting.

Rockefeller told a news conference, "Anything can happen between now and the convention but it is very unlikely" that any candidate could defeat Goldwater.

"Until I see a better candidate who has some solid support I shall continue to be a candidate," he said. "If the other situation should develop, I would be happy to join in it." At another point he said

"Realistically speaking, the major battle will now be over the platform."

Rockefeller, who lost the California primary to Goldwater, intimated he thinks other Republican moderates have been shirking their responsibility to oppose Goldwater publicly.

He said of Eisenhower, in this respect, "The effectiveness of the leadership he has taken has been affected by subsequent statements he has made."

This was a reference to Eisenhower's description of a "progressive, forward-looking" party nominee — which Rockefeller said didn't fit Goldwater — and the former president's subsequent statement that he hadn't read the Arizona senator out of the party.

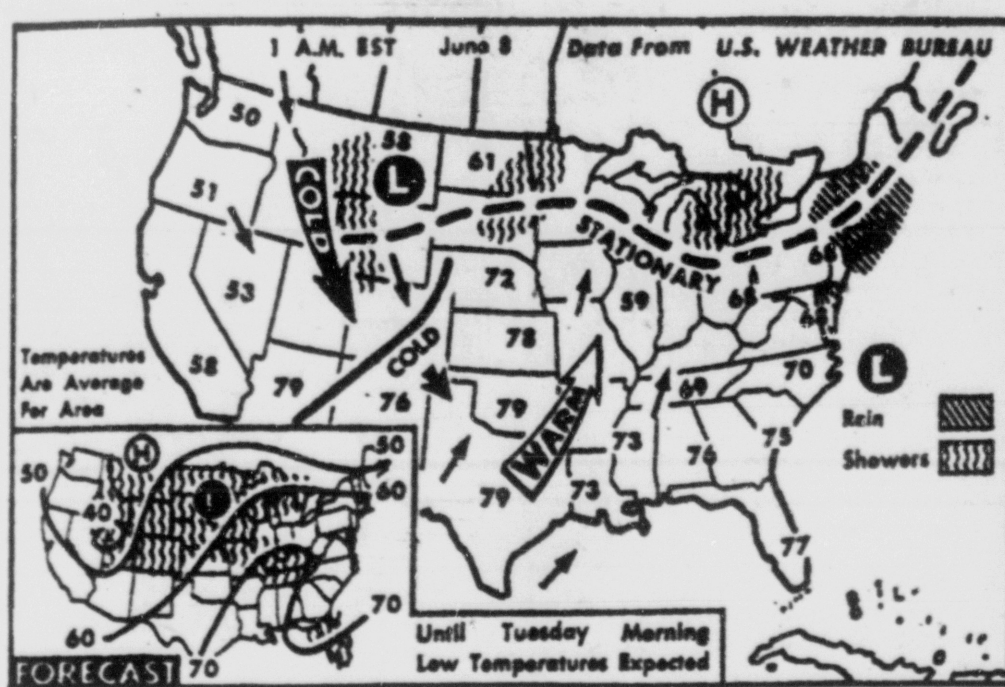

As for Scranton, Rockefeller said that after listening to him on television he didn't know whether the Pennsylvania governor was a candidate or not.

Gov. Robert E. Smylie of Idaho said it was the consensus of the GOP governors at an informal conference that Goldwater will be the party nominee.

Democrats generally stood on the sidelines but Gov. Otto Kerner predicted that President Johnson will carry Illinois no matter who the Republicans nominate.

And Alabama's segregationist Gov. George C. Wallace told a news conference that unpledged electorates will be on the November ballot in more than a dozen states. He said he would run on every one he could.

He said he thinks a bloc of from 50 to 70 electoral votes can be denied to the two major party candidates and might have the balance of power in the selection of the next president.

The listing was required when an order by the Subversive Activities Control Board against the party became final in 1961. The order was upheld by the Supreme Court when it upheld constitutionality of the Registration Act. The high court did not rule, however, on what the consequences would be if the party failed to register.

President Says Liberty Is Not Endangered

By FRANK CORMIER

SWARTHMORE, Pa. (AP)—President Johnson scoffed today at those who call the federal government "a major menace to individual liberty."

At the same time he appealed to college graduates of 1964 not to "feel alien to this world they are preparing to enter."

By some definitions, Johnson's message appeared to be aimed, on the one hand, at those who share the political philosophy of Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and, on the other, at the college-educated segment of "the beat generation."

In his address, prepared for commencement exercises at Swarthmore College, Johnson said: "Let us not call forth phantom fears about what the future holds."

Continuing, he said, "One of those fears is that the federal government has become a major menace to individual liberty."

"This," he asserted, "is not so."

The chief executive went on to ask a series of rhetorical questions, all of them obviously intended to be answered in the negative.

"Does government subvert our freedom through the social security system?"

"Does government undermine our freedom by bringing electricity to the farm—or by controlling floods—or by ending bank failures?"

"Is freedom lessened by efforts to abate pollution in our streams—or by efforts to strengthen competition in the free market?"

"Is freedom diminished by banning the sale of harmful drugs—or by providing school lunches for our children—or by preserving our wilderness areas—or by improving the safety of our airways?"

Johnson saved for last civil rights, a subject he has mentioned in every address he has made this year.

"Is freedom betrayed when in 1964 we redeem in full the pledge made a century ago by the Emancipation Proclamation?"

The President said that "far from crushing the individual, government at its best liberates him from the enslaving forces of his environment."

Alluding again to the civil rights issue, he said, "This government is fighting to free 20 million Americans whose rights and whose hopes have been damned because they were born with dark skin."

He went on to couple the civil rights issue with his antipoverty program, saying, "We are determined to wage unconditional war against the poverty that keeps one-fifth of our people in economic bondage."

No Chance of Being Derailed, Goldwater Says

about a bid for the vice presidency.

He said if Scranton had second place on a Republican ticket which failed to beat President Johnson the Pennsylvania governor would be in a position to claim the presidential nomination in 1968.

Goldwater told a news conference at Chester that he, Scranton and Nixon "are all very close together on Republican principles." He said they disagree only on minor points.

He made it clear that he sees Nixon as the man to whom his foes could rally in the battle for the nomination.

But as things stand now, Goldwater said, he expects to capture the nomination at the Republican National Convention in San Francisco next month.

"We're running out of actors in the stop-Goldwater drive, the front-running senator said.

Nixon said again Sunday night that he intends to have no part in any stop-Goldwater movement. But he told a group of Michigan Republicans in Detroit that he would willingly accept any assignment the Republicans gave him "and if the party should decide on me as its candidate, Mr. Johnson would know he'd been in a fight."

Goldwater heads today for a rendezvous with Nixon, Eisenhower and other top Republicans at the National Governors' Conference in Cleveland, Ohio.

Goldwater said Scranton could be the convention lightning rod for his opponents—but he added the governor "convinced me many months ago that he wants no part of this."

"The man I've seen all through this has been Nixon," the senator said. Goldwater did not elaborate, but he has said repeatedly he thinks the party's 1960 nominee will be his final hurdle on the way to the nomination.

Goldwater has reported a series of telegrams and telephone calls from Nixon in the past two weeks, disavowing any part in a drive to stop his presidential bid.

He said the former vice president has "made it unmistakably clear that he will not be a part of a stop-Goldwater drive."

Goldwater went to Chester to deliver the commencement address at Pennsylvania Military College and receive an honorary doctor of laws degree. He was cited as the "voice of reason" in American society, counseling against haste that could undermine real progress.

He cautioned some 300 graduates against "the illusion of co-existence and of peaceful accommodation" in the cold war.

Then he doffed his cap and gown, and issued a statement saying Eisenhower, Scranton and Nixon have made it clear they are not part of any effort to derail his drive for the nomination.

"Their position, it seems to me, is sound politically and philosophically," he said.

Bank Notes, Coins Stolen From Coin Show Attender

Thieves stole coins and bank notes from a man attending the coin show at the Antlers Hotel over the weekend in one of five theft cases reported by police this morning.

Herman L. Boraker of Rocky Ford told police 15 rolls of silver dollars minted in the late 1800s, five $20 bank notes and two $10 bank notes were taken from a closet in his hotel room sometime Sunday. He discovered the theft Sunday night after driving to Rocky Ford.

Two Ft. Carson soldiers caught a youth who stole a car from Lyndel George Cline, 317 E. Yampa St., Sunday afternoon. The soldiers, Dennis and Francis Martin, (no address given) saw the 16-year-old youth take the car from outside Cline's home.

They chased him in Martin's car to the 100 block of E. San Rafael St. where the youth abandoned the car after smashing it into a tree. They then chased the youth on foot to the Slocum Hall parking lot at Colorado College where they caught him. They took him back to Sachraiter's home before calling police.

In other theft cases, a go-kart engine worth $150 was stolen from Harold Glaeser, 1309 Bennett St. Glaeser said he had been working on the engine at the rear of his home. The engine was removed from a saw horse sometime over the weekend.

Thieves burglarized the Peak Bowl, 2861 N. Prospect St., Sunday morning and took an undetermined amount of change from candy and cigaret vending machines. The burglars entered through the front door.

Fred E. Owens, 2021 Manitoba Dr., reported that a transistor radio was stolen from his car Sunday. The radio is worth $16 and was in a black leather case, Owens told police. The car was parked outside his home at the time of the theft.

Goldwater is expected to face rough sledding in his attempts to muster support at the Minnesota convention beginning Thursday, the Maryland convention Friday and the Connecticut convention Friday and Saturday. At stake are 46 votes.

But Goldwater is viewed by political leaders in Missouri, Utah, New Mexico, Idaho and Virginia as the likely winner of most of their 58 votes to be decided in conventions Friday and Saturday.

There are other matters to be settled at state conventions this week:

Indiana — Republicans will nominate a Senate candidate from a field of three and a gubernatorial candidate from a field of seven. Two congressmen are in the running—Rep. Donald C. Bruce for the Senate and Rep. William G. Bray for governor. Democrats, meeting Thursday and Friday, are expected to renominate Sen. Vance Hartke for a second term and choose a gubernatorial nominee from among five candidates.

Utah—Republicans will either endorse or nominate candidates for Senate, House and governor. Under a new state law, the top two men at the convention go to the August primary ballot unless one of them gets an endorsement by 80 per cent of the state convention delegates.

There are only two candidates for the Senate—Rep. Sherman P. Lloyd and Ernest L. Wilkinson, former president of Brigham Young University. Neither is expected to get 80 per cent. Five men seek the nod for governor, including former Gov. J. Bracken Lee, State Publicity Director D. James Cannon and former GOP National Committeeman Melchior.

Connecticut — Republicans are expected to nominate former Gov. John Davis Lodge without opposition for the Senate seat held by Thomas J. Dodd. Dodd already has won Democratic nomination for a second term.

Idaho—Republicans and Democrats will nominate or endorse to a primary candidates for two House seats.

South Carolina — Democrats

There was Friday night's special 90-minute "CBS Reports" in which Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower returned to the Normandy beaches where the Allied forces launched their assault on Hitler's Fortress Europe on D-Day 20 years ago.

Sunday there was ABC's live coverage of the exciting windup in the Thunderbird Golf tournament as Tony Lama's final putt broke a tie with Mike Souchock and won him top prize money.

Finally Sunday night on NBC, there was a meticulous—and painful—account of the literal return to life of a young woman whose broken and burned body was pulled from a Nantucket plane wreck six years ago.

Last summer Gen. Eisenhower, accompanied by Walter Cronkite and a camera crew, went back to the English Channel countryside, now sleepy beach and fields, which two decades ago was the site of the largest amphibious invasion in history.

The former president, commander of the invasion forces, sometimes spoke with a crisp clinical detachment as he explained the principles and theories behind the huge operation. Then he would shift to a more personal vein, recalling an anecdote or explaining his own emotions at moments of decision.

Much of the film showed the general in casual sports clothes, strolling along a sunny beach where children played, or in a crumbling German pill box, or sitting in the war room preserved in an English country house. He responded easily to Cronkite's questions. Interspersed was film shot before and during the invasion.

NBC's "Patient in Room 601" used news film taken at the time of the Nantucket plane crash in August 1958 and interviewed many persons involved in the story of plucky Lita Levine who almost six years ago started off gaily on a summer vacation. Since then she has undergone more than 40 operations and lost all her fingers, but is now launched on a painting career.

The camera lingered overlong on some of the subjects, particularly her highly vocal mother and on the doctors with their cautious phraseology. The most moving portions were when the girl—she is now 29—was telling of her terrible ordeal, often with a touch of dry humor.

Sometimes it seems a shame that television programs do not come in half sizes. This was a good example of a program that would have been sharper and more effective if it had been told in 45 minutes.

Saturday night's "Defenders" episode on CBS, seemed to have been written right off the current headlines and was an interesting treatment of the law in connection with the civil rights, passive resistance movement. It had all the punch and vitality of a fine editorial.

More Delegates Seen for Barry; Doubts Voiced

By LARRY OSIUS

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Barry Goldwater's drive for Republican presidential nomination delegates is expected to near the 600 mark this week as 146 delegates are chosen in 10 states.

With the GOP convention opening five weeks from today, the Arizona senator has 535 first ballot votes according to an Associated Press survey of delegates already chosen. He needs just 120 more—655—for a first ballot victory.

Indications are that Goldwater will pick up enough votes this week to boost his front running total near the 600 mark and set the stage for the last two state conventions next week in Montana and Texas.

Goldwater will be favored to win most of those delegates, apparently giving him enough to win the nomination.

But Sen. Thurston B. Morton, R-Ky., said Sunday he thought Goldwater would be from 80 to 100 votes short of a first ballot nomination, and he envisioned "quite a contest."

While attention is on the GOP presidential nomination race, candidates for two governorships, three Senate seats and 10 House seats will be decided by voters or party conventions in five states.

Goldwater's post-California primary drive got under way over the weekend at State conventions in Colorado, Alabama, Washington and Hawaii and at a pair of district conventions in Virginia. Combined with some minor vote shifts in Iowa and the District of Columbia, he netted 65 votes, according to the AP survey based on primary commitments, pledges, instructions or stated preference.

The field shaped this way: Goldwater 535, Nelson A. Rockefeller 128, William W. Scranton 85, Henry Cabot Lodge 45, Richard M. Nixon 15, Margaret Chase Smith 93, Uncommitted 209.

Indiana Republicans meet today and Tuesday to elect 32 GOP delegates, but their votes have already been credited to Goldwater, under state law, because of his May 5 preferential primary victory there.

New York's Republican state committee meets Thursday and is expected to name 10 at-large delegates favorable to Rockefeller to go with the 76 district delegates he won in last week's primary. The New York governor also picked up five votes Sunday from the Puerto Rican delegation.

Goldwater is expected to face rough sledding in his attempts to muster support at the Minnesota convention beginning Thursday, the Maryland convention Friday and the Connecticut convention Friday and Saturday. At stake are 46 votes.

But Goldwater is viewed by political leaders in Missouri, Utah, New Mexico, Idaho and Virginia as the likely winner of most of their 58 votes to be decided in conventions Friday and Saturday.

Drivers Called On to Safeguard Children's Lives

Motorists and parents were called on today to shoulder their responsibilities in the "changing of the guard" as school children leave the safety of the classroom for the more dangerous summer play areas along streets.

Teachers and school safety patrols will no longer, for the vacation period, be able to stand guard over youngsters, the Rocky Mountain AAA Club pointed out in a statement urging motorists to be especially alert for children, who might dart out into the street in the excitement of playing games.

Parents were told by the motoring organization that child supervision duties, now that school's out, are entirely up to them. Backyard play areas were suggested as a way to get small children away from heavily traveled streets.

An auto club spokesman said that the first couple of weeks after school is out pose the greatest traffic hazards for small children, who, suddenly released from school discipline, are inclined to run wild. Later on in the summer, according to the AAA Club, the accident hazards decrease as children become involved in summer camps, swim programs, family vacation trips and dozens of other activities that get the youngsters away from vehicular traffic.

School guards, generally, do an excellent job, commented the auto club spokesman, but the replacement guards for the summer — parents — tend not to be quite so alert to potential traffic hazards.

Top Musicians To Teach DU Music Clinics

Distinguished musicians of national and international repute will be participating in workshops and clinics on the University of Denver campus during the summer session.

Nine special courses, attracting students from all over the country, have been scheduled by the DU Lamont School of Music for the summer quarter.

Two unique seminars, one on baroque music with baroque orchestra and the other on chamber music, will be offered for the first time by the music school.

The baroque music seminar, June 15-July 3, will cover the historical development of music of the baroque era with instruction on the design of the harpsichord and its function in baroque literature. A baroque orchestra, directed by Fred Hoepfner, assistant professor of music and assistant conductor of the Denver Symphony Orchestra, will participate through rehearsals and concerts.

Master class performances by the world renowned Netherlands String Quartet and concerts by members of the Denver Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Hoepfner, will be featured during the chamber music seminar, July 6-24. Instrumentation will include the harpsichord, violin, cello, flute and oboe.

The first national clarinet clinic, June 29-July 3, with instruction by seven outstanding clarinetists, will be held on the campus. It will be directed by Keith Stein, a foremost teacher of clarinet pedagogy and chairman woodwinds in the Michigan State University Department of Music.

Dr. Thomas Richner, a specialist in group piano instruction and a professor of piano at Rutgers University and Columbia University, will direct a one-week piano workshop June 29-July 3. Dr. Richner is a winner of the Naumberg and MacDowell awards and appeared at Town Hall this spring.

Two choral schools, directed by famous musicians in the field, will have their headquarters on the DU campus. John Finley Williamson, president emeritus of Westminster Choir College, will offer choral master classes from July 20 through Aug. 1, and Paul Christensen, chairman of the Department of Music and director of the renowned choir at Concordia College, will direct a choral school June 22-27.

The annual Central City Opera Workshop, offering young singers opportunities in staging and performing in traditional and contemporary opera, will be held July 7-34. The singers will receive coaching in style, language, singing, acting, staging and makeup by a staff headed by Mrs. Genevieve McGiffert, director of the DU opera department, and Thomas Martin, associate chorus master of the Metropolitan Opera Co.

Other workshops will be offered in elementary music education and in junior and senior high school music.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is self-control, no more, no less. It must be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

Affluence and Poverty

We hear so much talk about the "affluent" society. Galbraith made the phrase popular. But we also hear that our society is impoverished and that a war must be waged in order to overcome this dread enemy.

Is it possible that we live in two societies? Actually, it is not. What we live in is a society which is the target of government mentalizing from two directions. If you can convince the government you are poor, you become a cause celebre by means of which the government can hope to expand its power.

But, if the government becomes convinced that you are affluent, then you become a part of the target so that government can attack you to redistribute whatever it is the government thinks you are affluent in. The real problem is neither our affluence nor our poverty, both of which are relative terms. The problem is that we no longer have anyone in society who is to be left alone by the government.

To begin with, the society was pictured as having two extreme groups. At the top was a very small number of people... socialists used to say 2 per cent, who controlled 86 per cent of the wealth. (It turned out later that this was sheer propaganda, but that was the way the story went.)

Then at the bottom of society there was something like 5 per cent which were the impoverished "masses." These were the abused, the down-trodden, the misfits and the ne'er-dovells.

Government cast itself in the role of taking from the top group to give to the bottom group. But in the middle were all those folks who didn't belong to either group and who would, conceivably, be left alone.

The government began its program of confiscating wealth in the upper brackets only to find that there was no line of demarcation which could tell the government how far down one went before one got out of the affluent group. So taxing programs, beginning at the top, reached farther and farther afield.

However, the problem was confronted in exactly the same way at the other end of the economic scale. Everyone has "needs." Even persons who seem to have considerable means to provide their own "needs" still have "needs" which go beyond their abilities to provide.

Thus, when the government got busy doling out the goodies, it found no place to stop. Today, it not only subsidizes the economic misfits and the impoverished, but it subsidizes the contracts and special privileges some of the largest and most affluent of all the producers in the country.

What began as a program to take the cream from the top and pour it on the bottom, became a program which took the cream from everyone, gave some of it to people, often in the most unlikely places, and then ended with the government lapping up most of the cream for itself.

Today, nearly the only way for a person to be affluent (there are exceptions) is for the person to cancel out all moral restraints and join the government. This is the path of least resistance. And it doesn't require that you become an actual government employee, although that route is open to many. If you do become a government employee, you have preferential status; you have assured vacations and built-up sick leave, and big money and lots of prestige. You don't have to compete nearly so hard and things get better for you as they get worse for everyone else.

But you don't have to accept government employment, as we said. All you have to do is lose your backbone; your will to resist; your integrity. That puts you on the government's side right away, whether you could be classified as affluent or impoverished. Just convince yourself that what you know instinctively to be wrong, isn't really wrong because so many people are doing it. That clears it for you. And accuse everyone else who continues to voice opposition to the advancing state, of being insincere because he doesn't martyr himself in order to avoid policies and programs he knows full well are immoral.

That way you can stop objecting to what the government calls "progress," which is merely the progressive income tax and an increasing power to take over. And you can collaborate with the "new order," which is as old as Plato and as foolish as necromancy and any other superstition.

Fearful

Many people who profess to be interested in education are actually terrified at the introduction of a new idea. They really don't favor education; they favor conformity.

Socialized Medicine

Where did some people ever get the idea that the government ought to be handling the field of medicine? Actually, the idea is very old.

Everyone wants to be healthy and everyone wants to be looked after if he becomes ill. And in the dim and distant past, poverty was such a common experience for about 95 per cent of all the people, that the only ones financially capable of hiring a physician were politicians, beginning with the kings and the barons.

This is only one of the mistakes we have made in the past which rise to confront us now. Possibly this is the root of the general superstition that government is needed if we are to have an expanding economy. Politicians were at one time the only men of means, and they obtained their wealth through the looting process. So it would be natural, if we didn't know better, to suppose that the looting process is still the best way to get hold of wealth.

Since the days of the Industrial Revolution, industry and business have been blazing new trails, showing that men can be wealthy if they abandon looting as a process. But still the old myth of governmental dependence hangs on.

Getting back to the question of government (socialized) medicine, Germany pioneered by setting up a program of social security with certain health features as early as 1885. It laid the groundwork for the Franco-Prussian war and national poverty. Our own Social Security program, which is now being considered as a vehicle for the introduction of federal medicare, was copied from the German system.

As early as 1917, Lenin gave to the Russian people his idea of how a cradle-to-the-grave program of medicine would be handled by the state. But he was only following Marx's teachings in detail.

In France, social insurance was introduced in 1928 and France has never recovered from it. It was an aftermath of the first World War wherein hundreds of thousands of Frenchmen learned to depend on the army for their medical treatment. It should come as no surprise to anyone who has served in the military that the army employs centralized and socialized medicine in its treatment of the troops. It cannot be otherwise in any military organization.

Britain adopted full socialized medicine in 1948. The taxpayers pay for it, of course, and there have been many complaints about it. However, neither Britain nor any other country would be able to pay the full burden of a total socialized medical program and the U.S. taxpayers have been corralled to help bail out our British brothers and cousins as well as other nationals who have gone the same route. The trouble is, of course, that if America adopts socialized medicine at home, there isn't a nation on earth that could or would bail us out.

Now the principal problem with socialized medicine is that it destroys the physician-patient relationship. The doctor is no longer considered a personal expert of extraordinary capacity who is hired by the patient. Instead, he is viewed as the servant of all, and a minion of the state. He will treat those the state directs him to treat. A patient who wants his services may not be able to get him, if the state assigns another physician who is "just as good."

The harm done to the practice of medicine is enormous and most sensitive physicians are aware of it, although they often do not see just how the evil begins in such things as community "free" clinics, mass therapy, mass inoculation, and so on. The physician is all too often victim of his own lack of economic training and understanding. He forgets that he is a businessman and remembers only that he is to service "society." Actually, he is only to serve his patients, if he is to retain his professional ability to deal wisely and well on an individual basis.

But patients, too, are not really aided by socialized medicine although they are always led to believe that they can, through this practice, get something for nothing. The fact is there is no

Things Can Snowball

By AMBROSE HILLS

One thing that pleases me about life is the way things can snowball. A little bit of effort to get things started can have big results.

I noticed that the other day, when announcing that it was going to open in Winnipeg, the Mercantile Bank of Canada explained why in these words: "Our decision came after a study of the vigorous and intelligent efforts of Manitoba to become a major exporter."

I'm a Manitoba boy, and if anyone had suggested fifteen or twenty years ago that we'd become a major exporter of anything but wheat, I'd have laughed at him. Just the same, a few manufacturers began to investigate the possibilities. Governments began to offer inducements and encouragement. Soon everyone was talking it up, and some firms, after a few frustrating years of effort and many headaches began to get overseas orders. Banks began to take a mighty close look at this new surge and these prodigious efforts and decided they'd be able to help.

The big thing is not to give up. Keep pushing that snowball, and even if it rolls only an inch or two at a time, it starts to gather momentum and to grow.

Canadians are starting to grow, starting to highball. You can feel it in the air. They're beginning to look at the world as a possible market, the way the British did in their greatest days. Canadian labor deserves a great deal of credit, too, because they've backed management in this export drive by quality performance and common-sense wage negotiations. The new crop of labor leaders would rather be smart than tough, and they know that in the long run that attitude will get a higher standard of living. It has been a lucky combination of topflight men in management and labor that has given us this spurt. The snowball is rolling and it may yet be true that the sixties will bring the biggest boom—solid boom—that Canada has ever known.

THE PRESIDENCY

To the Editor:

One of the great tragedies that has befallen our wonderful country is that we hear too frequently, "A conservative cannot be elected President." If this is so, why? Because our country is over-run with Communists, liberals and internationalists? Is it because they call us "extremists"? How silly can they be? No one can be too extreme in love of their country or for their God and His blessings in giving them such freedom as we have, and a Constitution like the Godless U.N., controlled by the Communists, after we have spent billions upon billions to save us from Communist rule under a dictator. Talk about "extremists"! How silly can they get?

Heaven forbid that Nelson Rockefeller should be our President, he would be worse than "Johnny" and "Lindy" combined. Senator Goldwater is a mature man of right principles, abundant ability, honesty, and would bring our country back to its former dignity, truthfulness, and high standing in the world. Praise the Lord for men like Senator Goldwater.

CALIFORNIA PRIMARY

To the Editor:

What ever happened to America's sense of fair play? Never has a man, running for public office, been so maligned, misquoted and deliberately lied about as has Barry Goldwater. The recent California primary race was NOT between Goldwater and Rockefeller, but Goldwater against the entire field of candidates, announced or otherwise, plus most of the reporters in each of the news media.

I was under the impression that newsmen were paid to report the TRUTH in a FREE SOCIETY.

And where were Mr. Goldwater's fellow Republican office-holders, who certainly know his views concerning a RETURN to constitutional government, when these distortions appeared in print and on nationwide television?

Now, it is not too surprising to find news releases by representatives of foreign governments taking "pot-shots" at the senator. I resent this gang warfare, particularly since Pravda and Khrushchev got into the act in OUR internal affairs.

Our first President warned us of foreign entanglements, so we shouldn't be too surprised that Uncle Nikita wants to help choose the President of the United States.

Is this what we, the people have to look forward to in this election year?

CAMPAIGN

To the Editor:

If Goldwater does manage to win in California and go on to get the GOP nod in the convention, it will be an unusual campaign.

With the phony Trojan Horse Republicans, Lodge, Rockefeller, Eisenhower, Nixon and others like them in his corner such thing. Someone will always pay for everything and it won't be the government, for the government has nothing it hasn't taken away from others. So the patient will end paying out a great deal of money in support of other people and he will end receiving mediocre and indifferent care when the time comes for him to receive some of what he has already spent.

If the American bureaucracy had its way, the public would know nothing of government activities save the information released in public handouts. The funny business going on in Washington would never come to the attention of the voters and taxpayers.

The Press and the Public

By THURMAN SENSING

Mollenhoff, one of the best investigative reporters in Washington, gave the annual William Allen White memorial lecture at the University of Kansas.

Mr. Mollenhoff rightly stated that our form of government "is contingent upon an informed public with the means to learn what the government is doing and the right to criticize what the government is doing." He gave an accurate and alarming report on what the federal bureaucracy is doing today to create a "federal propaganda office."

He told how Secretary of Defense McNamara has instituted a "gestapo" directive to military officers "to discourage circulation of the views of persons who dissent from the department line." He told of Mr. McNamara's so-called economy move aimed at creating a single press office for the $50 billion a year Defense Department.

Another important fact brought out in his speech was government's use of favored reporters who would parrot whatever they were told by administration insiders. Mr. Mollenhoff cited the case of Otto Otepka, the State Department security officer, who was bounced from his job for being too vigilant in tracking down security risks in the department. "More outrageous than the State Department's action," he said, "has been the press performance. Some newsmen accepted the State Department philosophy that dissenters like Otepka should be squelched, and Congress barred from the facts."

Mr. Mollenhoff also described the importance of the press having access to the facts, as in the case of the controversial TFX aircraft contract amounting to $5 billion, so that the public can decide whether favoritism has been practiced and colossal sums of taxpayers' money wasted. The value of a vigilant press, he said, is that "we can make bad public officials toe the line or risk exposure and ouster."

Of course that's just what the federal bureaucracy seeks to avoid. It wants to treat the public business as if it were the bureaucrats' private business. If Big Government is ever to be brought under control, the public will have to demand that the propaganda agencies be closed down in Washington and the thought - controllers sent packing.

The truth is that the bureaucrats want to censor the facts and silence criticism of government. They want a protective shield around their doings. The only newsmen they like are pet newsmen.

This was ably brought out earlier this year when Clark R. American: "Here is where George Washington threw a dollar across the river." Englishman: "Well, that is not very remarkable, for a dollar went much further in those days than it does now."

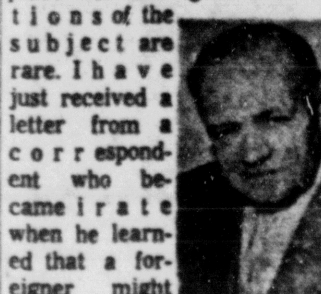

The American would not be worsted, so after a short pause he said:

American: "But Washington accomplished a greater feat than that. He once chucked a sovereign across the Atlantic."

Loans From Government

By GEORGE BOARDMAN

Conversation about government loans is rather commonplace but intelligent examinations of the subject are rare. I have just received a letter from a correspondent who became irate when he learned that a foreigner might be able to obtain a loan from the United States government at a very low rate of interest while an American might be required to pay as much as 3 per cent. Of course my correspondent forgot to notice the discrimination practiced by a government which professes much disapproval of discrimination. He also failed to take a look at the basic immorality of loans made by government.

Since government has nothing but what it takes from the governed, government makes loans with funds obtained, ostensibly, to run the government for the protection of the governed. If the loans are not repaid, the taxpayer is hooked, of course. When government makes loans to American taxpayers who are foolish enough to run to government for loans, it prefers to charge a nice rate of interest to the taxpayers who provide the money in the first place. When your government lends to foreigners, it prefers to present a benevolent facade to the world of borrowers — a hypocritical attitude of absolute immorality.

Now, a foreign government might obtain a loan repayable in 40 years at about 3 1/2 of one per cent. With fantastic kindness, your government may even excuse the borrower from paying any interest for the first ten years. Of course your government may also borrow money to lend to other governments at a higher rate of interest than it charges, but don't you worry about a thing; your government will take care of everything — at your expense.

True, if you are an American businessman, you will have to pay four times as much interest as a foreign government, but don't forget, it's your own money you are borrowing and your government is expensive.

But don't expect any sympathy from me. As far as I am concerned, any American who borrows from his government deserves the worst which may happen to him and that goes for F.H.A., V.A., Small Business Administration, farm loans or any other loans obtained from government, regardless of the rate of interest charged and regardless of the type of immorality which your government becomes involved in for the benefit of foreigners or other governments. I'm just not concerned with the whines of Americans who borrow from government.

Lending is not now and never has been a proper function of government, if you believe that government has right and wrong functions. From my point of view, every function of government is immoral but many people who believe government has a right to rule and steal under specifically outlined conditions balk at the idea of government lending. Unfortunately, many who oppose the idea of government lending in theory, borrow from government, anyway.

No, Mr. G., I will not support your candidacy because you hope to pass a law which will limit or control or reduce government ownership and control of lending institutions; because I will not sanction your right to rule over me. There is one sure cure for socialist lending institutions: refusal of self-respecting human beings to do business with government, and this

Forecasts

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

Everyone hates people who go around pointing in self-righteous fashion to their own successful forecasts.

The reason is that those who like to advertise their own good guesses ordinarily forget the boo-boo they have made. To hold on to my party card in the ranks of the humble, then, let me bracket my claim to prescience on a couple of matters with the memory of having made a mistake about U.S. and Central African politics: I once wrote a column predicting Moise Tshombe would keep his hold on the Katanga part of the Congo. Before that particular column had appeared in print the U.S. had cooperated with the U.N. to send Tshombe into exile.

In a couple of other prophecies this column has done vastly better. I recall predicting, in January of 1963, that the seven million car year had come to stay. Three months later Henry Ford II said the same thing, and the forecast thus became gospel in Detroit. And just last January, in a column devoted to public issues that had been troubling the U.S. for a long time, I remarked that the problem of our adverse international balance of payments might soon wither on the vine.

LESS PUSH
The unions, too, have been willing to abide by competitive realities. There have been few union wage contracts written in recent months that have tended to push beyond the point of natural productivity increases. After prolonged stalemate, the railroads have finally been permitted to do something about the featherbedding issue. And the rise of "unit" train shipments has cut the cost of transporting coal to the point where a big tidewater electric power company such as New York's Consolidated Edison can announce that it is planning to buy coal for its fuel in preference to taking more residual oil from Venezuela or wherever.

The danger is that the Johnson confidence boom may engender too many giddy feelings. The possibility of an automotive strike is something to watch. But the betting in this column's corner is that Lyndon Johnson will exploit his devotion to the "consumer" in such a way that the United Automobile Workers' Walter Reuther, who wants a Democratic victory next November, will not dare to flout the White House by pushing too hard for any wage increases that would really be inflationary.

As we have said before, capital tends to gravitate to the disciplined economies. This is the real reason why the gold drain has been halted and reversed. But discipline is as discipline does, and giddy people must be watched.

Q—What is moss agate?
A—A variety of agate, containing brown, black or green mosslike or dendritic markings, due in part to oxides of manganese. The dendrites or branching designs make moss agate the distinctive gem it is.

Q—How long does it take to create a Bonsai tree?

A—In general, a genuine Bonsai takes from 50 to 100 years. However, by twisting the trunk and restraining growth of tops and roots, a comparatively young plant can appear aged.

Facts About Osteopathic Profession

By FRED E. JOHNSON, D.O.

For the readers who are unfamiliar, or only slightly familiar with the osteopathic profession, a number of questions are bound to arise, and to these anticipated questions an answer and a brief explanation may be appreciated. Questions such as: What is osteopathy? What training is required of osteopathic physicians? How does it differ from other schools of medicine? Are they recognized by Blue Cross-Blue Shield? Do other insurance companies pay claims osteopathic hospitals and physicians?

Briefly, there are many who obviously do not know that osteopathy is a complete school of medical practice, embodying all methods of maintaining or restoring good health. The osteopathic school places strong emphasis on structural integrity of the body as an outstanding concept of basic osteopathy that is just as sound today as when it was first announced by the founder of osteopathy, Dr. A. T. Still, in 1874.

Through normal structure there is more assurance of normal circulation to all parts of the body, and normal nerve supply to all parts. Osteopathy does not offer a mono-therapy for man's ills. All subjects taught in class A. medical schools are taught in osteopathic colleges. It is a completely well rounded course of study, and places strong emphasis on methods of maintaining good structure, normal function, and of overcoming maladjustment of the bony, ligamentous, muscular and nervous anatomy. Students are graduated with the degree D.O.

The required course of study in osteopathic colleges is equal to and in some instances exceeds in required hours of study that of allopathic colleges. Pre-medical or pre-osteopathic requirements are the same for both schools of practice, a minimum of three years of college. However most medical and osteopathic students today have baccalaureate degrees on entering their four year course of study, this is to be followed by a year of internship.

As in many other states where the medical examining board is composed of medical and osteopathic physicians, this situation prevails in Colorado, and successful candidates are licensed to practice medicine under the laws of the state. Colorado has two D.O.'s on the board of medical examiners. Many states have separate examining boards and grant unlimited practice rights.

Osteopathic physicians are participants in the Blue Cross-Blue Shield program. Insurance company claims are honored on the same basis as those of other physicians.

There are many specialties in the osteopathic profession, such as surgery, obstetrics, anesthesiology, orthopedics, urology, neurology and psychiatry. Any and all of the proven modalities that are available to any of these specialty fields are available to the D.O. in his practice.

The United States government in all its branches recognizes the D.O. degree on exactly the same basis as the M.D. degree according to the law of individual states, and has legislated against discrimination.

National Officer to Speak At BPW State Convention

Dr. Frances Whitehead, Macomb, Ill., recording secretary for the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, will represent the National Federation of the 1964 State Convention of the Colorado Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs on June 12-14, at the Palmer House Motor Hotel.

As National Representative, Dr. Whitehead, will discuss the 1964-65 program, and plans and policies of the national organization. Dr. Whitehead is the second woman to receive a doctorate degree in economics from the University of Illinois. She is currently a professor of business at Western Illinois University.

Some 350 delegates and visitors are expected to attend the Colorado Convention.

With 170,000 members throughout the United States, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs is the recognized national organization for all women who work. It was founded in 1919 to promote the interests, elevate the standards and extend opportunities for business and professional women.

It is a member of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women whose membership extends to 30 countries. The 1963-64 program is "The Responsibility of Full Partnership."

"The theme," according to national Federation Recording Secretary, Dr. Whitehead, "Assumes special importance as we respond to President Johnson's drive to put more women into policy-making posts. Although the President's program is limited to government positions, we expect its impact to be felt in business and the professions also. Our Federation's program is built around encouraging women to educate themselves and develop the leadership qualities which will enable them to take the responsibility for the top jobs which are opening up in greater numbers."

James H. Boren, Special Assistant to the U. S. Coordinator for the Alliance for Progress program in Latin America, and director of the Partners of the Alliance, will be the Saturday evening banquet speaker at the 45th annual convention of the Colorado Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Boren joined the Agency for International Development as deputy director, U. S. Economic Mission to Peru in April, 1961 and he, his wife, and two sons, Richard and Stanley, ages 15 and 13, lived in Lima, Peru, for two years. It was there, working directly with the citizens of that country that Mr. Boren saw the need for a program such as he now heads.

Prior to his service with the AID, Boren has been Chief of Accounting Division of Texas Department of Agriculture, president of a Texas oil company and Administrative Assistant to Senator Ralph Yarborough of Texas.

He has taught in the California Public School System and was Professor and head of Department of Education and Psychology at Arlington State College, Arlington, Texas.

A native of Wheatland, Okla., Mr. Boren served two years in the U. S. Navy as a radarman. He received his B. A. in economics and government from the University of Texas, a B.A. in education and psychology from Long Beach State College.

Johnson Urges Unions to Stop Discrimination

By NEIL GILBRIDE
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson tries today to persuade labor leaders to move faster in opening up union membership and job opportunities for groups.

More than 100 top labor spokesmen, including AFL-CIO President George Meany, are expected to attend the conference, called by Johnson to discuss ways to put into effect union pledges against discrimination.

Although the AFL-CIO has repeatedly urged its members to drop all discriminatory bars, the administration reportedly is disappointed at the failure of some unions to practice at the local level what they preach.

Johnson, at a recent meeting of labor leaders, recognized this difficulty.

"We know that you cannot always tell your local unions what to do—as a corporation president can tell his plant manager. But all of you are persuasive or you would not be here today."

The aim of today's meeting, according to a spokesman for the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity, is "to get the unions moving in concert with management in opening up new job opportunities."

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz some months ago sent out nearly 50,000 questionnaires asking local unions about the racial and ethnic makeup of their membership.

"We didn't get many of those back," said the spokesman.

"There is a particular problem in that some unions have the wrong idea that to survive requires that they exclude people from their locals."

Scheduled speakers include Meany, Wirtz and Hobart Taylor Jr., executive vice chairman of the Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity.

The bidding has proceeded:

1 Dia. 1 Hrt. Pass
2 Clbs. Pass 2 Spds. Pass
What do you bid now?

A—Pass. This looks like a complete misfit and one more bid could get you overboard. While it is true that you have adequate protection in the unbid suits, notrump seems unsound, for you have no place to develop tricks. Partner's hand figures to be at least as unbalanced as yours.

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 Dia. 1 Hrt. Pass
2 Clbs. Pass 2 Spds. Pass
What do you bid now?
A—This is a close call between two notrump and two hearts with a slight preference for the former. This hand falls a point short of the textbook requirement for the jump rebid in notrump (19 points), but it possesses the compensating feature of a good five card suit plus the fitting Q-10 in partner's suit.

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:
For those who want to wash a wet-nip in the washing machine but don't know how:
Remove the handle, push the string mop into an old nylon stocking, and tie the top of the stocking.
Run it through the regular wash cycle. The nylon stocking prevents the lint from escaping, and the mop comes out beautifully clean.—C. V. C.

Dear Heloise:
Have you ever had your rolling pin cover shrink? Well, mine did.
I hit upon the idea of using an old, nylon stocking for a cover, and it works fine.

I knotted one end of the stocking below the top border and cut off the excess. I slipped the rolling pin inside and pulled the stocking very tight, then put a rubber band around the handle to hold it taut. Cut off the excess on this end, too.

It makes a satisfactory cover to which the dough does not stick. Try it.—Genevieve Gordon

It works beautifully.—Heloise

Letter Of Love
Dear Heloise:
When I send my husband off to work each day with his lunch, I write an affectionate message on his paper napkin—a pleasant reminder to him that as busy as I am with our children, I have not forgotten for a moment that without his love and devotion for nearly 13 years I just couldn't exist.—Mrs. Gloria Zenon

P.S. Now the children want messages written on their lunch napkins.

Dear Heloise:
A facial tissue dipped in milk, and rubbed over the leaves of houseplants will not only clean them, but will also add a soft gloss.—Lillian Frahm

Agree or disagree? I have tried about forty different methods, and ended up with salad oil on all my philodendrons! Now what do I do? What's your suggestion? Please write in care of this paper. Lots of people have made this "oily"

Diamonds, A-Q-9-8; Clubs, A-5.
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass Pass 1 Hrt. Pass
4 Hrts. Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A—Five diamonds. Partner's jump to game after his initial pass indicates a hand that in support of hearts may be revalued at 14 or more points which with your 20 points could spell a slam. A Blackwood bid would be pointless because of the worthless doubleton in spades. If, over five diamonds, partner merely returns to five hearts you may decide to pass.

What do you bid?

A—Two clubs. This is admittedly irregular, but the call is made in anticipation of conserving space. The auction will likely reach four hearts before it gets back to you again and you will find that, had you chosen to overcall with one spade originally, you would now be forced to bid five clubs. With the initial overcall in clubs, however, you can conveniently bid four spades and offer partner a choice of suits one level lower.

The agency, in a new publication—Converging Social Trends, Emerging Social Problems—reported also that a fourth of the women with children, who head many of the families without a man, have annual income of under $1,000.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, M.D., Ph.D.

Lola's case should be discussed in every high school for she is like millions of other teen-agers, both girls and boys. Train yourself to be sexual opposites and don't make a mountain of a minor physical defect. A jolly personality and the use of compliments can offset Lola's trouble, even without use of the electric needle.

By GEORGE W. CRANE
PH. D., M. D.

CASE S-485: Lola G., aged 17, is a high school senior.

"Dr. Crane," she spoke dejectedly, "I am becoming an introvert."

"For you can notice my problem if you just look at my upper lip."

"Why, people think I am growing a mustache! Isn't that horrible?"

"How can I ever win a boy friend and get married? Oh, I am so unhappy that I feel like taking an overdose of sleeping pills!"

Then she nervously shook out a cigarette and started snorting smoke through both nostrils like an old coal locomotive!

MALE SYMBOLS

Actually, Lola's fuzzy upper lip was not nearly as evident as she imagined.

For people who have even a very tiny flaw are often so conscious thereof that it looms unduly large to them.

They are thus inclined to make mountains out of molehills.

Millions of women have a little fuzz on their upper lip, yet they are jolly personalities who win boy friends galore and marry happily.

Yet other girls are so excessively conscious of hair on their lips or on their legs, that they become unduly introverted.

Such hair is often regarded as vaguely masculine but not nearly as much so as a cigarette in a girl's mouth, or a liquor glass in her hand!

Vulgarity, profanity or even excessive slang are much more masculinizing influences than a little superfluous hair.

The "image" of an attractive girl that most men hold in their minds is a distinctly feminine personality.

They want her to be 100 per cent feminine and not contaminate herself with 25 per cent masculine traits or fashions or even 10 per cent.

"Opposites attract," runs an old adage that is just as true today as 100 years ago.

And by "opposites" we refer not to differences in religion or education, ideals, etc., but to physical or sexual "opposites."

Many a husband has reported to me that he has become platonically with reference to his wife because of her boyish haircut, her smoking and her adoption of other male traits.

"Dr. Crane," is their typical report, "when I wake up and see her lying on the pillow beside me, she looks like a teenage boy."

"So I feel a vague homosexual revulsion. That's why I find it increasingly difficult to grow romantic about her."

If you girls wish more vividly to understand this reaction, would you feel very romantic about a male who dressed in feminine lingerie, used women's rouge and lipstick, and minced along on high heels?

Obviously, you would NOT!

Then why do you girls act like sheep and meekly follow the silly fashions and fads that reduce your own feminine charm?

You employ silks and perumes to attract a boy friend; then you unwittingly rebuff him by your cigarette and coarse talk!

If you do have any physical blemish that a doctor will admit needs correcting, then remedy it, too.

Pre-Vacation Safety Checks Now In Order

Now is the time to make pre-vacation auto safety checks to insure trouble-free driving this summer and fall.

State Patrol Chief G. R. Carrel has suggested a thorough rundown on major and minor correction needs prior to taking warm weather camping, fishing or other outing trips. He said it is one of the best insurance policies against trouble which could develop later.

"More and more people are taking to the highways pulling a boat behind a family filled automobile now that summer days are here, and it increases our traffic problem," declared the chief.

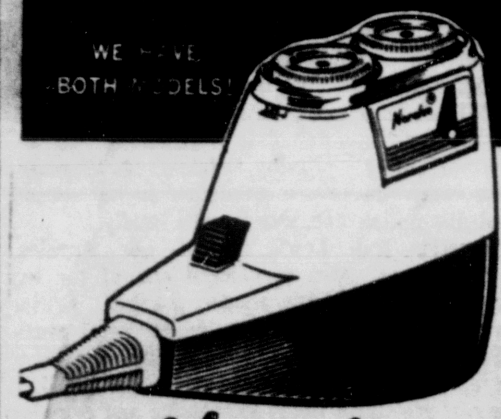

"Every precaution should be taken to insure your safety and the safety of others," he said. "Lights on boat trailers should be checked; you should check your trailer hitch and safety chains, turn signals and other items which mean safer motor ing. These checks should be made every time before you start out on a trip."

Above all, the chief urges motorists to observe the traffic laws, for their own protection and the protection of others using the highways of our state.

"Colorado has a pleasure and sports-loving bunch of residents and visitors," said Carrel, "but a lot of those who start off on a carefree trip this summer won't get back unless they heed the safety rules laid down for their own good. Use common sense thinking and actions."

Backers Want Goldwater Foreign Policy Accepted

By GLENN URBAN
Gazette Telegraph
Political Writer

Some Goldwater backers want the nation to turn to a foreign policy of a man who never was president.

Arizona Sen. Barry M. Goldwater is the present front runner for the GOP presidential nomination. Some people believe he will be nominated on the first ballot in the national GOP convention the middle of next month in San Francisco.

Billboard advertisements now seen in this area proclaim that Goldwater offers a program that is not an echo of any other, and that he therefore offers voters a real chance for a change.

Just exactly how much change Goldwater would make in U.S. foreign policy, probably will be spelled out a little more clearly between now and the convention by Goldwater himself.

However, some of his backers know just the kind of policy they want regardless of what Goldwater may say or not say. Not only does this group want a change in U.S. foreign policy, but it knows whose policy it wants and takes a firm stand on the issue.

A postcard is being offered

Jean Graham To Seek Reelection

Mrs. Jean Graham, Colorado's Democratic National committeewoman, has announced her intention to seek reelection at the Democratic State Convention to be held July 18 in Denver.

A resident of Lakewood, Mrs. Graham has long been active in Jefferson County politics, having served as precinct committeewoman and party captain.

First elected to the National Committee in 1960, she was appointed by Democratic National Chairman John Bailey to serve on the party's Executive Committee.

In this capacity, she escorted President Lyndon B. Johnson to the podium for his keynote address to the National Campaign Conference for Democratic Women, held recently in Washington, D.C. She also chaired a general session of the conference, which was attended by 3,500 Democratic women from the 50 states.

Mrs. Graham is also a member of the Executive Committee of the Democratic Western States Conference and has served as program chairman for that group.

In advising Democratic State Chairman Robert Maytag of her candidacy, Mrs. Graham stressed her desire to continue her work for the election of President Johnson and a Democratic Congress to support him.

"In my travels around the state, she said, 'I am more than ever convinced that the Democrats will win overwhelmingly in November. The women with whom I have been meeting are enthusiastic and excited over the President and his program and the prospects for the entire Democratic slate. When there is this much eagerness so early in the campaign, we cannot help but win.'"

Mrs. Graham is married to attorney Charles A. Graham and is the mother of three children. They live at 2345 Routt St., in Lakewood.

One national committeewoman and one national committeewoman are selected every four years at the State Convention. Mrs. Graham is the first announced candidate.

by Goldwater supporters to any one who wants one that gives a voter an easy way to tell the Republican party the voter is urging a change.

If signed and mailed by a voter, the card is sort of a personal ultimatum to the Republican party to nominate its most avowed conservative — (and this is Goldwater) — or face the threat of a third party.

The man whose foreign policy is being urged upon the Republican party is the late Republican U.S. Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio, the son of William Howard Taft, GOP president of the United States from 1909 to 1913, and later Supreme Court justice.

Robert Taft was known as a conservative Republican. Beginning about 1940, he was mentioned as a possible Presidential nominee. About 1950, it looked like he might be the GOP nominee in 1952 and he and his backers mounted a strong drive to capture the nomination.

However, what is generally considered to be the liberal wing of the Republican party put forth Gen. of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower; after a hot fight in the convention Eisenhower won, and the rest is history.

Taft died of cancer before Eisenhower finished his first term.

Although there may be some doubt among many voters as to what Taft's foreign policy was, since he was never president or secretary of state, the people offering the cards to the public say that they want it because they know it was conservative, and they want to be conservative.

The card is addressed to the Republican National Committee in Washington, and requires only a stamp and the voter's name and address, along with his signature.

The message on the card states:

"Dear Sirs, Unless you run a candidate for president who is a constitutional conservative and who will give us a foreign policy in line with that of the late Robert Taft, I shall vote for any conservative third party in the presidential race while voting conservative in the Senate and House races."

At the bottom of the card in small print is "Paul L. Stuck, 940 Margaret, Shreveport, La. $1.90-250 Cards Post-paid."

Armed Forces News

By STEVE TILLMAN

WASHINGTON (Special to the Gazette Telegraph) In approving the new military construction bill the House Appropriations Committee stressed the point that maternity care for dependents should be in the Armed Forces hospital facilities rather than in civilian hospitals whenever possible.

In a new move the Army will minimize, if not totally cutting out, support to the 21 delayed or low-priority Army Reserve and National Guard units. The active support is to be directed toward Active units, and the "Ready to go" National Guard and Army Reserve units.

As anticipated the Army now has formal proposal to give hard pay to non-rated soldiers whose duties require them to go via aircraft.

If the Marines are sent into Thailand on a maneuver it probably will mean that Defense Department will decide to leave them there permanently or at least until the situation in Viet Nam becomes settled.

Troops in Okinawa while not on any specific alert to move out if situation calls for such deployment, do have the readiness status is such, that they can move just as fast as the Air Force can send in planes from Japan and Hawaii, according to Pentagon sources.

Naval Air Reserve is getting some badly-needed transportation aircraft. Within the next ten months, 27 C-118 (R6D) transport planes will be put into Naval Air Reserve service. They are former Military Air Transport Service aircraft that are being replaced by new ones.

Vice Adm. Benedict J. Semmes, USN, Chief of Naval Personnel, will be the guest speaker at the Naval Reserve Association's 11th National Conference to be held in Tampa, Fla., October 8-10.

More than 50,000 active duty officers and men retire each year. There are many problems connected with the adjustment from an active military life to that of civilian life. The best counselor to advise retirees and potential retirees on military-civilian problems is an Adjutant General in the opinion of the Gulf American Land Corporation. As of May 1 Army retired Deputy Adjutant General Bruce Easley, West Point of 1929, became associated with the company as its military consultant. The Gulf American Land is building several retired communities in Florida with a strong military population. General Easley will keep these retirees advised on problems that concern them.

Informal word from the Pentagon would have the next possible pay increase for military retirees not until April of 1966. The pay increase will be based on the Consumer Price Index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Department of Defense sources say that it is possible the Congress will be asked to increase the present uniform allowances for Reserve officers from $200 to a possible $400 figure. It may be that another effort will be made to include Regular officers in the program.

If the Air Force makes reductions in its proficiency pay charts as expected this year, it is anticipated that the "skills" program will be used as the basis for making the pay reductions. This is called the technical index of airmen specialties.

Pentagon studying the problem of married enlisted men in the lower pay grades with the possibility that some in the lower grades would be "out of uniform." The program if it receives approval would mean greater losses for the Air Force than any of the other services.

Active Service personnel is holding what is known as "Armed Services FHA mortgages" are to be "hit" with an extra expense of $60 a year when they either retire or leave the active services. This is the cost of the mortgage insurance, now paid by the Government, which the individual will assume when he leaves active duty.

Post Exchanges will display posters warning servicemen of the danger involved in cigarette smoking. This is being done at the request of the Medical chiefs of the Armed Forces.

The Army has decided that 6 weeks of basic combat training is insufficient to make a soldier out of a recruit. This decision was based on a recent evaluation of extensive tests conducted on a group of "6 weekies" and "8 weekies." The eight week trainees were superior to the other group.

Army "OCS's" have been filled to capacity of recent schedules even though facilities have been expanded. The present output of officer-graduates of the Officer Candidate Schools is 1800 a year. The 1965 graduates are expected to be half from college graduates enlisting specifically for the OCS.

Seven new Army Enlisted Military Occupational Specialties, commonly known to the Army as "MOS's" are being added and six are being deleted. In addition 25 are being revised.

Manpower Utilization Committee of the House is planning to check into the use and cost of using military personnel and contractors to do work that can be successfully handled by Civil Service employees. Congressman Henderson of NC says that the "key" question for which answers are sought is "what is the most economical and effective way to get the job done?"

The Comptroller General has raised the question of legality in sending a Memorial Certificate to next-of-kin of deceased Service personnel and veterans. The cost is 22 cents per certificate. VA will seek Congressional authority, if necessary, to continue this recognition of deceased veterans.

Overseas "PX" facilities are due for reorganization. In some countries they will be cut back. In some other areas, such as in Europe, facility use to retired personnel and active duty personnel on leave, may be reduced. At this time there is no talk here of reducing medical care overseas for retired personnel and dependents.

Brig. General Thomas R. Ford, now commander of the Kanto air base at Tachikawa AB Japan, under orders for Air Defense Command, Ent AFB, as Deputy Chief of Staff for Materiel.

Pentagon is trying to "keep lid on" recommended list of ship yards to be closed down so that it will not become a political issue in the 1964 campaign. Members of Congress intimating that in certain districts it will be the major issue.

Military personnel holding the Armed Forces expeditionary Medal and other "cold war" medals, now rate "veteran preference" for Civil Service positions.

Civil Service Commission is taking an unfavorable view of Veterans Administration proposal to Department of Defense to take over Service Retirement program. The commission says that the move would delay it in getting service data on applicants for positions. Both the Pentagon and VA say that there will be no delay. The VA has strong position for its proposal since the law says that once the individual has left the service, he becomes a "veteran."

Some, primarily retired Regular officers, are subject to recall if their services are required. Since their records, that is, for retirees, will remain with the Department of Defense, Pentagon sources see no problem in this area.

Navy is to consider proposal that the Chief Petty Officer-type uniform now undergoing test be adopted as a permanent uniform for 1st and 2nd class petty officers after their initial enlistment.

Local Artists Invited to Draw Christmas Seal

Local artists are being invited to compete in a design contest for the 1966 Tuberculosis Christmas Seal sponsored by the National Tuberculosis Association.

The El Paso County Tuberculosis Association has announced that the State Association this year is sponsoring a "Call for Artists" contest in the hope that a Colorado artist may submit the winning design for the 1966 Christmas Seal.

A first prize of $125, which was donated, will be given to the Colorado artist whose drawing is chosen by a qualified jury to select the winning Colorado design. The second prize is $50, and third prize is $35.

All entries will be sent to the National Tuberculosis Association for the national contest. An award of $1,000 is offered to the artist whose work is selected. The deadline for Colorado artists' entries is Sept. 2. All entries should be sent to the Colorado Tuberculosis Association offices, 1633 Vine St., Denver, CO 80206.

Artists who wish to compete in the contest may obtain a pamphlet entitled "A Call for Artists" which gives instructions and specifications for the design. Those interested in seeing seals of previous years may do so by visiting the local Tuberculosis Association offices of the Tuberculosis Association, 809 N. Cascade Ave., Colorado Springs, Colo. 80903, telephone, 632-5001.

Today in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP)—In the news from Washington:

RED RIVALRY: The clash between the Soviet Union and China "most probably" will lead to a complete break but war between the Communist giants is unlikely, writes Dr. Mose L. Harvey, a State Department specialist on communism for 17 years, in the current issue of U.S. News & World Report.

"As things now are and seem likely to continue for the indefinite future, neither has the slightest thing to gain from a military showdown," Harvey wrote in the copyright article. He recently left the government to become director of the Center for Advanced International Studies at the University of Miami.

"Prediction in the realm of human relations is a precarious game," he wrote at another point. "Yet every objective consideration, every pertinent factor, bespeaks the strongest likelihood that the split is for keeps. Compelling circumstances indicate that a lasting settlement—with or without Khrushchev or Mao, or both—verges on the impossible."

PRAYER: The Bill of Rights is "our most precious heritage" and any narrowing of its present guarantees in the field of religion could impair the other liberties it protects, 223 constitutional lawyers told the House Judiciary Committee in opposing any amendment to permit public school religious exercises.

The committee last week completed hearings on proposed amendments. The chairman, Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., has not yet set a date for closed deliberations on the various proposals.

The lawyers pressing the committee to reject any and all amendments included 55 law school deans, including Erwin N. Griswold of Harvard, Eugene V. Rostow of Yale, Phil C. Neal of the University of Chicago, Vernon X. Miller of Catholic University, Jefferson B. Fordham of the University of Pennsylvania and Frank C. Newman of the University of California. Their statement was made public Sunday.

RED BLOC: Former Secretary of State Christian Herter says there is a growing independence from Moscow in Romania, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, particularly in the economic field, "and I think we ought to encourage that."

Herter, who is serving President Johnson as a special representative for trade negotiations at Geneva, voiced approval of the recent extension of most-favored-nation treatment to Poland and Yugoslavia and said the United States should use trade concessions to encourage Communist satellites to be independent.

The former secretary, a Republican, spoke on a program taped by Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., for television stations in New York State and New Jersey.

COMMUNION: President Johnson, a member of the Christian Church, received communion Sunday at St. Mark's Episcopal church. His wife and daughter are Episcopalians.

Last month, the Rev. Canon Albert J. Du Bois, executive director of the American Church Union, a voluntary association of Episcopal clergy and laity, questioned whether the president is eligible to receive communion.

He is, said the rector of St. Mark's, the Rev. William M. Baxter, and the Episcopal bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. William F. Creighton.

FOREIGN LOANS: Postwar repayment records indicate the United States will get back a large proportion of the dollars loaned for foreign aid, plus billions more in interest. Of $25.7 billion loaned abroad by the U.S. government since World War II, the foreign recipients have paid back $10 billion on the principal so far plus $4 billion in interest, Commerce Department statistics showed Sunday.

Nonreturnable grants and gifts over the same period amount to about $75 billion, the largest part in direct and indirect military aid and food for peace outlays.

Theater Strike May Be Ended In New York

NEW YORK (AP)—A tentative agreement that could end the Broadway theater strike was announced today by Mayor Robert F. Wagner.

He said negotiators for Actors Equity Association and the League of New York Theaters agreed at 3 a.m. but their action is subject to a vote by the governing bodies of both groups today.

The terms won't be disclosed until presented to the governing bodies, Wagner said. The negotiators said they were confident of acceptance.

The strike, called Saturday night, has closed only two performances—Sunday matinees of "Oliver!" and "The Deputy." Customers got refunds or tickets for later dates.

It could affect 16 other shows including the musical "Hello, Dolly!" with Carol Channing, "Hamlet," with Richard Burton, and "Dylan," with Alec Guinness.

One musical producer—Joseph Cates of "What Makes Sammy Run?"—signed a separate agreement with the union Sunday, and there were reports that others also might break ranks.

Cates signed on the union's terms, with a proviso that his contract would be altered to agree with whatever terms are eventually reached with the league.

The union demanded a $15 increase in the $117.50-a-week minimum pay for actors over four years of a new contract. The owners had offered $5, but proposed binding arbitration, which the union rejected.

Cates agreed to an immediate $125 minimum, raising it to $132.50 in the fourth year. He said only seven of his chorus of 20 were getting less.

Rehearsal pay would rise from $117.50-a-week until it equaled performance pay in the fourth year. There also were increases for stage managers and traveling players.

The terms apparently were similar to the union's demands. It also was asking a national six-day week for road companies. In some cities, such as Chicago and Detroit, road companies work seven days.

About 700 actors and actresses and 4,000 workers in various crafts are affected by the negotiations.

Equity's old contract with the league expired a week ago, but Wagner gained two extensions of the strike deadline.

Four years ago, a similar dispute closed 22 New York theater for 11 days. Three shows failed to re-open.

LAURENCE HARVEY IS BUSY NEW YORK (AP)—Laurence Harvey is a crowded season schedule for the coming season.

The British actor is due to start rehearsals in midsummer for the London production of "Cameo." Another announcement has him pledged to Broadway appearances in a comedy, "Alfie." Dates for the latter, however, depend "entirely on the availability of a suitable theater."

Dear Abby--

Compulsive Talk!

DEAR ABBY: Is there something wrong with me? Whenever I take a trip on a bus or train, I get into very intimate conversations with the person sitting next to me. I don't know why, but before I know it, I am telling this person my life's history. I've told complete strangers things about myself that I'd never think of revealing to anyone I know. If I ever ran into any of these people again I would die of shame, but I can't seem to help myself once I get going. I am not a child. I am a grown woman who has seen 33 summers. Please don't use my name. —TALKS TOO MUCH

DEAR TALKS: Some people who "talk too much" are reacting to a deeply rooted psychological problem. If you're lucky, it won't hurt you (although it may bore others). Meanwhile, try counting to ten before you start, then talk about something besides yourself. You MAY not be that interesting.

DEAR ABBY: I live in a very small town where everybody knows everybody else's business. After I graduate from high school it is only natural for people to wonder why I don't look for a job. The trouble is I can't work because I am five months pregnant, and I have to get out of this town as soon as possible. I am being pressured from all sides to go look for a job. I have only enough money for a bus ticket to a place not more than 200 miles from here. Is there a home for unwed mothers that will take me in? Please put your answer in the paper. —MARION (not my real name)

DEAR MARION: Send me your real name and address at once and I will send you the information you need immediately.

DEAR ABBY: My son was asked to be an usher at his friend's wedding. He will have to rent a tuxedo for the wedding. Who is supposed to pay for it? —MRS. D.

DEAR MRS. D.: Either you or your son, depending on his resources. But in any case—not the friend who is being married.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from Wrestler's Wife has prompted me to write. Soon after we were married my husband's brother would snap his fingers on my bare arm, shove me, and otherwise horse around. I didn't want to make an issue of it, and my husband didn't say anything, so I let it go. Sixteen years ago, at a family reunion, this brother rushed across the room, grabbed both my feet and pulled me off the davenport. I hit the floor like a melon. My teen-age children were present and so were his. The laughter ceased when I couldn't get up. When it was ascertained that I had broken the end of my spine, my brother-in-law felt terrible. Since then I have spent weeks in the hospital, months having therapy and years in a heavy body brace. I might have been spared all this if either my husband or I had made it clear from the start that I did not want to be touched. —COULD EVEN DO THE CHARLESTON

J. Seiler Laboratory, discuss results of a computer run related to his research. Such work can be done on the computer recently installed in the lab. (Air Force Photo)

Electronic Data Process System Used at AFA

A versatile, high-speed electronic data processing system has been installed at the Air Force Academy.

Located in the Frank J. Seiler

Research Laboratory, the Burroughs B 5000 will support fundamental research programs managed by the Office of Aerospace Research and will also be available as a research tool for Academy faculty members and selected outstanding cadets.

Computer courses at the Academy, have until, now been electives. Availability of the new machine will make a required course in computer applications possible.

Maj. William D. Marsland, director of the Computer Division of the Seiler Lab, is in charge of the installation and operation of the research system.

Installation of the system is expected to stimulate a wide range of research projects. Some of the projects will be accomplished through "simulation" or setting up a mathematical model of an object or process.

The new computer will also be used to simulate an "analog computer," a different type of machine serving a different purpose. This capability will allow the Seiler Lab to perform ana-logue studies without the additional equipment.

Training courses in the use of the computer for research scientists and faculty members are now underway to "teach the teachers" and to encourage the faculty to use the new machine.

"The development of high-speed computer systems has opened vast new areas for researchers," Major Marsland said. "For example, trajectory studies which take just three or four minutes by computer take many hours to calculate by hand. In fact, our researchers, using a computer, can do in hours what would take them a lifetime without it!"

Reasons People Look for Work Survey Question

The reasons why people are looking for work — whether they lost or quit their jobs, left school, or other reasons — will be a new question in the June Current Population Survey, it was announced today by Francis H. Wilmer, Director of the U.S. Bureau of the Census regional office at Denver.

This question will be in addition to the usual inquiries on employment and unemployment included at the request of the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics in the Census Bureau's monthly Current Population Survey.

The Census Bureau, also, will ask supplementary questions this month of women who have been married to obtain information on the number of children born.

The Current Population Survey will be conducted here and in 356 other sample areas throughout the country during the week of June 14. Census Bureau interviewer who will collect information locally is Mrs. Donna M. Binkley, 1233 La Salle St.
